Description of the 35th Annual Scientific Sessions:

The Eastern Nursing Research Society is pleased to accept abstracts to be considered for presentation at the ENRS 35th Annual Scientific Sessions. This year's theme is Promoting Liberty: Addressing Determinants of Health Through Nursing Science.

The 35th Annual Scientific Sessions appeal to all individuals interested in advancing nursing science, including nurse researchers, leaders in evidence-based practice, and dedicated nursing science students and faculty.

2023 Conference Objectives:

- Explore historical, existing, and emerging nursing knowledge addressing the impact of social and structural determinants on individual, community, and population health.
- Discuss the robust role nursing science has on understanding the impact of social and structural determinants on health.
- Curate strategies to design, implement, and disseminate nursing science that promotes health equity and mitigates disparities.

ENRS Workshops are one hour in length. Interested parties should complete the Concurrent Workshop Proposal Form below. This year's theme is "Promoting Liberty: Addressing Determinants of Health Through Nursing Science".

Please submit the form below by Tuesday, October 11, 2022. Accepted applications will be notified in early December. Historically, two standing workshops include: 1) a Funding Agencies Update and 2) an Editors' Presentation. You may review the previously covered conference topics on our website as a guide.

We will prioritize workshops that highlight nursing knowledge addressing the impact of social determinants of health on the individual, community and/or populations. Examples of potential workshop topics include how to: design, implement, and disseminate nursing science that promotes health equity and addresses disparities; implement creative PhD-DNP research collaborations to address the needs of a diverse society; utilize findings from nursing science to influence policy or implement change in practice.

All presenters are required to be paid registrants for the ENRS Conference.

The Concurrent Workshop Submission Deadline is Tuesday, October 11, 2022, at 11:59 p.m.
